ALBERTA POOL ELEVATOR SPACE

The building program undertaken by Alberta Pool elevators during the current year, in order that patrons might get additional storage space for their deliveries, was revealed in a radio address given by R. D. Purdy, general manager, last week.

The program provided for added space of some 5 and a half million bushels of grain, and was as follows:

Four twin elevators
Twenty-one cribbed annexes.
One hundred and forty balloon-type annexes.

The country elevator system, numbering now 424 houses, with the additional annexes can accommodate 23,000,000 bushels of grain.

Three terminals operated, two at Vancouver and one (in conjunction with the Manitoba Wheat Pool) at Port Arthur, provide space for about 9,000,000 bushels. The total capacity of the entire Alberta Pool system is thus approximately 32,000,000 bushels.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURAL NOTES, OCT. 3, 1940.

SEEDING CRESTED WHEAT GRASS

Fall seeding of Crested Wheat grass is recommended for the period between August 15th and September 20th. Farmers who had planned to sow the seed during this time but have been unable to do so, can still sow it this fall. Crested Wheat Grass may be seeded late in October or in November before freeze-up.

Since soil drifting is a problem in areas where Crested Wheat Grass is grown, it should be seeded on stubble fields or on land well covered with trash. Even under such conditions, the seedlings will have ample protection and will be assured of a good snow covering during the winter. The seedlings of this grass are very tender and are particularly susceptible to damage by hot winds. Once the stand is established, it rapidly crowds out weeds and is quite drought resistant.

About 8 lbs to the acre is the proper amount to sow. It may be broadcast or seeded with a drill.

Five Hurt In Auto Accident

Five people were hurt but only one required hospital attention when two cars collided on the Drumheller highway, 23 miles northeast of Calgary, at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening Sunday evening. Platz Hettler, Youngstown, suffered spinal injuries, cut under his nose and shock and was taken to the Holy Cross hospital by ambulance.

The four other persons received treatment for minor injuries at the scene of the crash.

Hettler was a passenger in a car, driven by Paul Habunka. Youngstown, which collided head on with a car driven by Anton Krenzler, of Belker.

World War Ace Unfurls Flag

Somewhere in England, Sept. 30 (P.P.) Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., today unfurled the new Royal Canadian Air Force flag which flew for the first time in England, when he visited a Canadian army co-operation squadron in this beautiful, rolling country.

The flag, similar to that of the Royal Air Force, is blue with a Union Jack in the upper left hand corner, but in place of the familiar red dot on a white background inside a darker blue ring, it has a red maple leaf. The flag, approved by the King, was designed in Canada.

Of Potential Value

The recent announcement that the Federal government is considering a proposal to send a mission of officials to Great Britain to study the needs of that country for Canadian agricultural produce appears to contain the germ of a reasonable and sensible suggestion.

Such a plan, if implemented, could not do any harm and might be productive of much good. Its effects, provided the mission is well chosen as to personnel, might be far reaching and the resultant objectives could very well be beneficial to both Great Britain and this country, not only for the remainder of the war, but for the future, long after guns have ceased to bark and bombs to spread devastation.

The immediate and paramount objective is, and necessarily must be, assistance to Great Britain to help her win the war as speedily and as effectively as possible and to this end Canadian agriculture must be directed with the greatest degree of efficiency possible.

That this is the impelling force behind the proposal is evidenced by the words of the government spokesman who, making the announcement said: "If an official party goes over (to Great Britain), it will not be with the object of seeking a market for Canadian products, but rather to see what the needs are, and to make provision to supply them without haggling over prices."

This undoubtedly summarizes the viewpoint of every Western Canadian farmer who realizes that there will be no future at all for him and his family, that he will have no choice as to what he shall grow and how, and that what he does produce will be grown under conditions of absolute serfdom, if Hitler and his Nazi hordes are allowed to conquer Britain.

At the same time, it is quite on the cards, that it will be found that the best form in which this assistance to the Motherland can be rendered, may be of material advantage to the future stabilization of the agricultural industry by directing it towards greater diversification, even though it may mean immediate sacrifices and perhaps sacrifices as long as the war lasts.

Potential Objectives

As the government spokesman said, the object of the mission is "not with the object of seeking a market for Canadian products," but nevertheless it may be found upon investigation that the needs of Britain can best be served by furnishing in greater quantities and better quality those agricultural commodities which will serve the best interests of long-range agriculture in this country.

As an illustration one might cite butter as a potential objective, and butter is mentioned solely for illustrative purposes. Beef, sugar, or some other direct or derivative agricultural product might just as well be considered.

However, consider butter as a possible real and serviceable need for Britain which perhaps could be supplied by Western Canadian farmers.

Western Canadians who have come in contact with children evacuated to this country since the outbreak of the war have commented upon the astonishment of these little Britishers at the lavishness with which butter is used in the average Canadian home. Butter, during the past few months has been so severely rationed in Britain that these little ones have become accustomed to eating their bread with little more than a thin trace of butter with which to garnish it.

As every one knows, before the subjugation of Denmark, that unhappy country was one of the principal sources for the supply of butter to Britain. Butter has been rationed in Britain to infinitesimal quotas by Canadian standards, and margarine is being used to supplement these meagre supplies. Is it not possible that British people would welcome substantial supplies of good quality butter, if Canadian farmers were able to furnish good quality butter at a reasonable price, or even at a comparatively low price?

If there is a real need for butter in Great Britain and if other considerations due to the exigencies of the war do not stand in the way of preventing acceptance of Canadian butter in the old land, might it not be good business for the Western Canadian farmer to cater to this apparent need at a very small margin, if the proposed delegation find that the road is open?

A Long Range View

Assuming that such a need exists, that the way is clear to meet it and that war necessities do not prohibit it, one can imagine that the development of this market for a Western Canadian product might serve Western agriculture an excellent turn, if not immediately, then, at any rate, after the war. It would mean a better balanced agriculture and a greater stabilization of the industry, the need for which may become very apparent sooner or later in the future.

The point is stressed that butter is here mentioned as purely hypothetical. It may not be butter, it may be something else. It will be the duty of the mission to find out how best Canadian agriculture can help win the war but, at the same time, it is found that assistance can be rendered in such form that it will confer a long range benefit upon the agricultural industry of this country, it will be that much the better.

Warplanes Are Costly

Buy a warplane! This is the favorite pastime in Britain, and among several organizations in Canada. In case you are interested, the prices are cited. The fighter planes, which have taken such a heavy toll of German invaders, Spitfire and Hurricane, cost $26,700 and $20,025, respectively; a Blenheim bomber $75,650, a Wellington $111,250, and a Sunderland flying boat, $222,500.

Military Training

Regulations Regarding Calling Of Men For Home Defence

Proceedings and regulations relating to and governing the calling of men for military training under the National Resources Mobilization Act are set forth in detail in an order-in-council published in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette.

It gives the minister of national defence power to establish training centres, staff them and determine the number of men to be trained and the length of period of training. Staffs will be paid on the basis of the Canadian Active Service Force rates.

The order requires the minister of national defence to call upon the minister of national war services for the necessary number of men and to indicate what numbers of French-speaking men shall be called so that they may be accommodated in either French, English or bi-lingual camps.

The order provides for medical examination of men upon their reporting to training centres and attachment of the fit to some unit of the Non-permanent Active Militia.

Men who complete training will be given certificates as proof of their service.

The period of training is set at 30 days "or such other period as the ministers may from time to time prescribe."

The order provides for food and clothing during periods of training, pay on the basis of Non-permanent Active Militia rate and transportation home. In the event of too many men being called for the accommodation at any training centre the order instructs that the surplus men shall not be medically examined but forthwith returned to their homes.

A man who has taken training, the order provides, may be transferred without his consent to any corps of the militia other than that to which he was originally posted or to the naval or air forces but only for home defence.

Any man called up who commits an offense against military law while undergoing training may be punished according to military law after the period of his training has elapsed.

New Bodleian Library

Little Notice Taken Of Opening On Account Of War

Something which at another time would have attracted wider attention happened at Oxford University a few days after German forces had occupied Paris. The doors were opened of the new Bodleian Library, building since 1937 and providing book stacks sufficient to hold 5,000,000 books. The Bodleian receives automatically a copy of every book published in England.

The old Bodleian, heretofore to be used for reading rooms and staff offices, remains as an historic reminder of another opening of doors nearly three and a half centuries ago. That was in 1603, where the bookless Oxford University Library—whose books and manuscripts had been provided by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, in the fifteenth century and destroyed or dispersed in the sixteenth—had been resupplied by Sir Thomas Bodley with a collection valued at about $50,000. At the same time he paid the cost of enlarging the existing building and provided a fund for the purchase of books and maintenance of the library—Christian Science Monitor.

When Honors Are Withdrawn

Ceremony Of Degradation Takes Place In Windsor Chapel

At Night
King Victor Emmanuel of Italy is no longer a member of the Order of the Garter. A recent issue of the "London Gazette" contained a command from the King for the removal from the lists of honorary members of the British Orders of Chivalry and from the rolls of foreign holders of British decorations and medals of all names of persons who are of German or Italian nationality. The Knights of the Order of the Garter is one of the most important of Emmanuel's British honors. His banner and shield hang in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. The ceremony of degradation takes place at night. The banner and shield are taken down, the banner is trampled upon by high officials of the Chancery of the Order, and then removed to the vaults beneath the shield to rust, the banner to decay. It was understood that King Leopold's name would shortly be removed from the British honors list. Mussolini and Sir Aldo Castellani, the specialist, also lose their decorations.

Dutch Flier Takes Revenge On Nazis For Killing His Family

Devon Francis tells this story: A one-man air force in the person of a Netherlands flier whose family was wiped out at the start of the Nazi offensive through the Low Countries last May is carrying out nightly "vengeance" raids from Britain against German military objectives in the Netherlands.

The airman is Koene D. Parmentier, former chief pilot for the Royal Dutch Airlines. His raids have been directed principally against the Germans at Rotterdam, where his family was killed during the Nazi bombing which signaled the start of the spring blitzkrieg; and The Hague and Amsterdam.

After each raid he drops a signed note overboard to advise the Netherlands inhabitants, for their own protection, where he will strike the following night.

I first ran on to the story of Parmentier in Bermuda and confirmed it in United States aviation circles.

It is reported, but unconfirmed that the Nazis have placed a price equivalent to $10,000 on his head.

When the Germans invaded the Netherlands, they levelled whole sections of Rotterdam with bombs. Of the sixty pilots in the Royal Dutch Airlines, forty were put into uniform for air defence. All were killed.

Of the remaining twenty, Parmentier escaped, first to France, and then to Lisbon, Portugal. There he mingled with the flying fraternity of the port. He said he was going to repay the Germans many-fold.

He got to England, offered his services—with qualifications. He was to have the use of Netherlands planes. He was to make his raids alone. He asked nothing but supplies of bombs and fuel. The Royal Air Force agreed.

For weeks now, regardless of weather, he has carried on his vengeance flights. He leaves by the clock and returns by the clock, stalking off without a word after he lands.

Soldiers And Sailors In England Keep Woman Tattooist Busy

Grace Bell, England's only professional woman tattooist, is working overtime designing arrow-pierced hearts, sweethearts' names, anchors, army crests, bugles and Union Jacks on the heavy chests and arms of sailors and soldiers.

The war has caused a great revival in tattooing and 20-year-old Grace is kept busy at her electric needles. "Sailors are still our best customers," she said. "Tattooing is traditional in the navy and is more popular than ever to-day."

Her proud job was when the heroes of the battle of the River Plate came back to Chatham. Most of them were boys from the Ajax and all wanted "Battle of the Plate, 1939" tattooed beneath buildings or Union Jacks.

Grace has had many proposals of marriage from her customers but has turned them all down in favor of "Joek", a Scots sailor, who doesn't believe in tattooing and refuses to let her do her name on his arm.

The Park Lane Mystery

By Edgar Wallace

"I've been making inquiries," said this surprising ex-convict, "and I've discovered that Sir Joseph is in all sorts of financial difficulties. This is unknown to the Prime Minister or even to his closest friend, but I have had a hint that he was very short of ready money and that his estates in Cheshire were heavily mortgaged. Now, Mr. Carlton, do you conceive it as possible that the speech in the House was made with the deliberate intention of slumping the market, and that Sir Joseph was paid hand-money for the part he played?"

As he was speaking, he clasped his hands before him, his fingers intertwined; he emphasized every point with a little jerk of his clasped hands, and, watching him, the mist rolled from Jim Carlton's brain, and he instantly solved the mystery of those private cinema shows which had kept Mr. Ingle locked up in his flat for a week. And to solve that was to solve every mystery save the present whereabouts of Sir Joseph Layton.

He listened in silence whilst Ingle went on to expound and elaborate his theory, and, when the man had finished:

"I will bring your suggestion to the notice of my superiors," he said conventionally.

It was evidently not the speech that Mr. Ingle expected. For a moment he looked uncomfortable, and then, with a laugh:

"I suppose you think it strange that I should be on the side of law and order—and the governing classes! I felt a little sore when I came out of prison. Elk probably told you of the exhibition I made of myself in the train. But I've been thinking things over, Carlton, and it has occurred to me that my extremeness is not profitable either to the pocket or my mind."

"In fact," smiled Jim, "you're going to become a reformed character and a member of the good old Tory party?"

"I don't know that I shall go as far as that," demurred the other, amused, "but I have decided to settle down. I am not exactly a poor man, and all that I have got I have paid for—in Dartmoor."

Only for a second were the old harsh cadences audible in his voice. He nodded toward Allen Rivers.

"You'll persuade this girl to give me a chance, Mr. Carlton? I can well understand her hesitation to keep house for a man liable at any moment to be whisked off to duress, and I fear she does not quite believe in my reformation."

He smiled blandly at the girl, and then turned his eyes upon Jim.

"Could you not persuade her?"

"If I could persuade her to any course," said Jim deliberately, "it would not be the one you suggest."

"Why?" challenged the other.

"Because," said Jim, "you are all together wrong when you say that there is no longer any danger of your being whisked off to duress. The danger was never more pressing."

Ingle did not reply to this. Once his lips trembled as though he were about to ask a question, and then with a laugh he walked to the table and took a cigar from the box.

"I guess I won't detain you," he said. "But you're wrong, Carlton."

The reason for Jim's presence was to arrange a local supervision of Greenham House and to obtain certain assistance in the execution of a plan which was running through his mind, and that task would have been completed when the black-faced man was brought in, but that the officer he had called to see was away. Jim lingered a little while, talking police shop, before he paid his last visit to Sir Joseph's house. He had the inevitable reply: No news had reached Whitehall Gardens of the Foreign Minister.

The man he came to see at Every street was due to appear at the police court in the role of prosecutor, and Jim strolled down to the court next

The police have nothing on me! They may frame something to catch me, but you'll have to be clever to do even that."

As they passed out of the building:

"I seem to spend my days giving warnings to the last people in the world who ought to be warned," said Jim bitterly. "Allen, maybe you'll knit me a muzzle in your spare moments? That will help considerably!"

The outstanding feature of this little speech from his girl's point of view was that he called her by her name for the first time. Later, when they were nearing her lodgings, she asked:

"Do you think you will find Sir Joseph?"

He shook his head.

"I doubt very much if he is alive," he said gravely.

But his doubt was to be dispelled, and in the most surprising manner. That night a drunken black-faced comedian hit a policeman over the head with a banjo, and that vulgar incident had an amazing sequel.

CHAPTER XX.

There is a class of entertainer which devotes its talents to amusing the queues that wait at the doors of the cheaper entrances of London's theatres. Here is generally to be found a man who can tear paper into fantastic shapes, a ballad singer or two, a performer on the bones, and the inevitable black-faced minstrel.

It was 11 o'clock at night, and snow was lightly falling, when a policeman on point duty at the end of Every street saw a figure staggering along the middle of the road, in imminent danger from the returning theatre traffic, which at this time of night is fairly thick in Mayfair. The man had obviously taken more drink than was good for him, for he was howling at the top of his voice the song of the moment, and making a clumsy attempt to accompany himself on the banjo which was slung around his neck.

The London police are patient and long-suffering people, and had the reeling figure been less vocal he might have passed on to his destination without interference. For drunkenness in itself is not a crime according to the law; a man must be incapable or create a disturbance, or obstruct the police in the execution of their duty, before he offends. The policeman had no intention of arresting the noisy wayfarer. He walked into the middle of the road to intercept him, and quiet him, and then discovered that the reveller was a black-faced comedian with extravagant white lips, a ridiculous Eton collar and a shell coat. On his head was a college cap, and he was making hoarse loud sounds with the banjo.

"Hi, hi!" said the policeman gently. "A little less noise, young fellow!"

Such an admonition would have been sufficient in most cases to reduce a midnight songbird to apology, but this street wail stood defiantly in the middle of the road, his legs apart, and invited the officer to go to a warmer climate, and not satisfied with this, he swung his banjo and brought it down with a crash on the policeman's helmet.

"You've asked for it!" said the officer of the law, and took his lawful prey in a grip of iron.

By a coincidence, Jim Carlton was at Every Street Station when the man was brought in, singing not unmusically, and so obviously drunk that Jim hardly turned his head or interrupted the conversation he was having with the inspector on duty to look at the charge. They made a rapid search of the man, he resisting violently, and at last, when they had extracted a name (he refused his address) from him, he was hustled between a policeman and a jailer into the long corridor off which the cells are placed.

The door of Cell No. 7 was opened, and into this he was pushed, struggling to the last to maintain his name.

"And," said the jailer when he came back to the charge room, wiping his perspiring brow, "the language that bird is using would turn a soldier pale!"

The reason for Jim's presence was to arrange a local supervision of Greenham House and to obtain certain assistance in the execution of a plan which was running through his mind, and that task would have been completed when the black-faced man was brought in, but that the officer he had called to see was away. Jim lingered a little while, talking police shop, before he paid his last visit to Sir Joseph's house. He had the inevitable reply: No news had reached Whitehall Gardens of the Foreign Minister.

morning, arriving soon after the magistrate had taken his seat, where he met the inspector from Every street. Before Jim could broach the subject which had brought him, the inspector asked:

"Were you at the station when the black-faced fellow was pulled in last night?"

"Yes, I remember the noisy gentleman," said Jim. "Why?"

The inspector shook his head, puzzled.

"I can't understand where he got it from. The sergeant searched him carefully, but he must have had it concealed in some place."

"What is the matter with him?" asked Jim, only half interested.

"Dope," said the other. "When the jailer went and called him this morning it was as much as he could do to wake him up. In fact, I thought of sending for the divisional surgeon. You never saw a sicker looking man in your life! Can't get a word out of him! All he did was to sit on his bed with his head in his hands, moaning. We had to shake him to get him into the prison van."

The first two cases were disposed of rapidly, and then a policeman called John Smith, and there followed into court the black-faced comedian, a miserable object, so weak of knee that he had to be guided up the steps into the steel-railed dock. Gone was the exhilaration of the night before, and Jim felt an unusual thrill of pity for the poor wretch in his absurd clothes and black, shining face.

The magistrate looked over his glasses.

"Why wasn't this man allowed to wash his face before he came before me?" he asked.

"Couldn't get him to do anything, sir," said the jailer, "and we haven't got the stuff to take off his make-up."

Effect Of War On Music

Artists Of Ability Leaving Europe And Will Live In America

The war is doing odd things to music, and it's the physical side of the art that suffers most.

It's true that in certain lands, particularly Germany and Russia, dictators have ruled out music. The Soviet has objected to works by Tchaikovsky and Rimsky-Korsakoff because they are presumed to be steeped in the old regime and, therefore, dangerous to young Communists. Hitler has frowned on certain composers because they are Jewish.

But time has shown such conditions are likely to relax after the zealous cool a bit—they already have in Russia, says John Selby of The Associated Press.

The real danger abroad is that music will be directed as well as supported in part by governments, and that blood or political ideas rather than ability will govern.

Europe's loss is, theoretically, North America's gain. The Rachmaninoffs, Kreislers and Lehmanns long have spent most of their playing time in the Americas. But if there follows a financial tightening Americans will be competing against a larger field for fewer musical jobs. So far the opposite is true financially.

Letter Travels Two Years

Was Written In 1938 And Mailed From Irish Island

Started on its way from Minaford Island, Ireland, on August 10, 1938, a letter has reached Philip Wharton, of Waterford, Ont.

Mail from the island is sent in water tight tin cans because boats cannot reach the shore owing to coral reefs. Swimmers take the cans out a distance and mail boats come along and pick them up when they can.

The letter reaching Mr. Wharton was first picked up on October 1, 1938, by a mail boat and was seemingly again cast adrift in the path of another mail boat, being picked up a second time on August 9, 1939.

Bombs Demolishing Isolationism

"Nazis bombs are demolishing American isolationism faster than British homes. They are failing to destroy moral or military resistance in Britain but are building it up in the United States." —The Christian Science Monitor, September 23, 1940.

Irrigation Projects

Survey Made In Manitoba By Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Organization

The Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act organization has completed a reconnaissance survey of the streams and rivers of agricultural Manitoba during this fall as a preliminary measure to ascertain prospects for construction of irrigation projects in that province. It was announced by John Vallance, superintendent of water development of Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act.

The work was undertaken at request of the Manitoba government. The immediate objective of the surveys was to determine what lands could be irrigated by rivers and streams, provided there is sufficient flow to make such undertakings economically feasible.

A report of the results of the preliminary survey will be prepared and submitted to the Manitoba government.

Amazing Aviation Feat

Australian Pilot Landed Two Planes Which Had Interlocked

Aviation men at Melbourne expressed amazement at the feat L. G. Fuller, an advanced student in the Royal Australian Air Force, in landing two twin-engined planes which interlocked in collision at 1,000 feet. The strange landing was made in a paddock near Wagga in New South Wales.

While three or four trainees in the two planes bailed out, Fuller remained at the controls of the upper plane. The propeller was deeply buried in the other machine's engine housing, but he was able to operate the wing controls and landed with amazing skill without further damaging either machine.

The fuselage of Fuller's plane partly crushed the other's cockpit, slightly injuring the pilot, but this was the only casualty.

No Doubt About It

Perfect Record Of Lynching Given In Arizona Years Ago

A "gentle" way to describe a lynching has been found in the files of one of the first newspapers published in Tombstone, Arizona, once the toughest, wildest mining town of the Southwest.

A February, 1884, issue of one of the papers described how a mob of citizens stormed the Tombstone jail and removed Jack Heath, who had managed to escape the death penalty for murder.

The coroner, hearing that Heath had been hanged by the mob, investigated and then wrote the following report: "We find that Jack Heath came to his death from lack of breath."

With Fine Weather This Week Farmers are Busy

Threshing and combining have been held up almost continuously for the past two weeks. Rain combined with heavy dews and fog has made the wheat so damp that it was unfit for market and the elevators refuse to accept it.

With a month of clear weather all the pleasant hum and bustle of the out door work will be over, but merchants and business people will be busy reaping returns from the largest crop harvested in Chinook district for many years.

There will be a special Thanksgiving Service held in the United Church Sunday October 13th. All are invited to attend.

Mrs. P. Sherman, and Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Garriot, all of Calgary are visiting for a week or two at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wanner.

"HUMANITY HAS STRUCK ITS TENTS"

At one stroke the thousand-year-old British Constitution was abolished by the British House of Commons...

It was done by the passage of an act that could be placed on a sheet of notepaper.

In a few hours the capitalistic organization of society was undermined.

Profit as a motive in human association was suspended.

Labor relinquished cherished rights and privileges as its contribution.

This momentous change heralds the passing of an era.

Humanity has once again struck its tents and is on the march.

Join the trend and aid in placing the co-operative movement strongly in the vanguard of a new hope.

TRAINING PLAN STARTS OCT. 1 - FOUR AREAS

Four Alberta Regiments to be In Charge at Red Deer, Camrose, Grande Prairie

EDMONTON, Sept. 12.—Alberta will be divided into four recruiting areas under the compulsory military training scheme, each area to train men for 30-day camp periods starting around Oct. 9, Joseph P. McIsaac, registrar for the scheme has announced.

He gave a list of tentative boundaries of the recruiting areas following a conference with Major F. Rogers, representative of the district officer commanding Military District 13, Calgary. Major Rogers has been detailed to act as liaison officer between the military district and the Alberta "draft" board.

Four Regiments

Each of the four training districts will be identified with one of Alberta's four infantry regiments—the South Alberta Regiment, Calgary Highlanders, Edmonton Fusiliers and Edmonton Regiment.

The men called up under the scheme will train at three compulsory training camps now under construction at Red Deer, Camrose and Grande Prairie. They will live in huts now being built at the three camps.

South District

Tentative boundary for the South Alberta Regiment's area will take in that portion of Alberta lying north of the international boundary and south of a line commencing in the vicinity of Mount Sentinel and running due east to Perikland, then to Champion, northeast to Bassano, then along the line of the C.P.R. to Empress on the Saskatchewan border.

Tentative area assigned to the Calgary Highlanders includes that portion of the province lying north of the northern boundary of the South Alberta Regiment's area, and south of a line commencing at the British Columbia boundary at 52 degrees latitude, thence east to Bowden, then southeast to the Saskatchewan boundary at Al-sask.

Both the South Alberta Regiment's area and that of the Calgary Highlanders will have their compulsory training camp headquarters at the Red Deer Camp.

North Areas

Area for the Edmonton Fusiliers, men for which are to go to the Camrose camp lies north of the northern boundary of the Calgary Highlanders' area, and south of a line commencing at the B.C. border at Yellowhead, thence along the line of the C.N.R. to Edmonton, thence southeast along the C.N.R. to Wainwright at the Saskatchewan border.

Edmonton Regiment will have the area lying north of the northern boundary of the Fusiliers' area, including the district of Mackenzie. Men from this area will train at Camrose and Grande Prairie.

Personnel from the city of Edmonton will be divided between the Fusiliers and the Edmonton Regiment. Boundaries may be changed slightly pending approval by military authorities, but will remain roughly as they have been drawn up, it is expected.

Carloads of uniforms and equipment for the men to be trained under the scheme have been arriving in Calgary in recent days.

DEFENCE TAX MAY RETURN 35 MILLION

Most Far Reaching Personal Tax—Effects 1,200,000 Canadian Workers

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—Revenue from the new national defence tax will start flowing into the treasury next Monday when employers of some 1,200,000 Canadian workers will begin remittances of deductions they have made on payrolls in accordance with the act.

The National Defence Tax, most far-reaching of any personal tax ever imposed on Canadians, is largely collected by employers who thus become temporarily assessors for the income tax branch.

Imposed in the budget of last June 25, the tax calls for two per cent of all incomes in excess of $500 a year for single persons and $1,200 a year in the case of married persons. It is three per cent on the salaries of single persons earning more than $1,200 a year.

Remit Sept. 16

The tax became effective in and after last July 1 but machinery was not ready to receive remittances from employers until Sept. 16 and those making the deductions were asked to withhold them until that time. Henceforth remittances will be made on the 15th of each month and the tax is expected to return $35,000,000 annually.

Since the tax applies to all workers from the most casually employed to those in permanent positions, there will be many instances in which the aggregate personal income will fall short of the taxable minimum.

In such cases the person concerned may submit a claim at the end of the calendar year, advising the commissioner of taxation the amount he has earned during the year. If the records bear out this claim, the amounts deducted from his earnings will be returned.

The Chinook Branch Of The Canadian Red Cross Will Hold Concert And Dance October 25th.

A record crop of wheat and an expanding live stock industry will very likely lead to a greater use of wheat in the feeding rations. For some time it has been known that wheat is satisfactory for feeding hogs and from experience conducted at the University of Alberta, it was found that wheat compared very favorably with barley for fattening swine.

In one experiment, equal parts of wheat, oats and barley gave average daily gains somewhat higher than were made on either grain when fed alone. The same experiment indicated that less of the mixture was consumed per 100 pounds gain than when the grains were fed alone. It was also found that less wheat than barley was needed to produce 100 pounds of pork.

In the case of cattle, wheat can replace barley for either dairy or beef animals. For dairy cows wheat should be coarsely ground or rolled, and for beef cattle both barley and wheat give better results when ground. In the grain rations of dairy cows, wheat should not constitute more than 50 per cent of the mixture.
